PRINCIPAL'S MESSAGE

File Edit View Help

What a start we've had to 2026-27. In just a few weeks, you turned "new term" into "new era" — full of curiosity, optimism, and fearless self-expression.

The Dharohar Fest showed us how it's done: you remixed tradition with Y2K boldness. Heritage isn't behind us — it's the code we build tomorrow with.

This was a short term, but you made it mega. Now — log off, glow up, and own your summer. Come back recharged and ready to shine even brighter.

Have a bright, bold, totally YOU summer !

Y2K is not just a fashion movement or a trend, it is a cultural revival that celebrates the bold spirit of the early 2000s. This era reflected optimism, curiosity, and a fearless approach to self-expression.

In 2026, Y2K fashion has resurfaced not merely as nostalgia, but reimagined to suit modern sensibilities. Today's generation blends the past with practicality, making old trends feel fresh and relevant once again.

It invites us to embrace life with unrestrained enthusiasm and a shared courage to dream big. It reminds us that our brightest days aren't confined to the past — they are being created right now, in these halls.

Let's lead the way into this new chapter with confidence and color.

Happy Reading!

WORDSMITHS OF SKV

*I saw the world when I was born,
But I knew nothing about it then.
With a tiny heart, I came to you,
And slowly learned again and again.*

*As I grew up, you sent me to school,
Where teachers were kind and cool.
They taught me lessons, old and new,
And showed me what was right to do.*

*I came back home, happy and bright,
Singing songs with full delight.*

*When I grew older, brave and strong,
You sent me where I had to belong—
A boarding school, far from home,
Where I felt I was all alone.*

*“It was terrible!” I cried one day,
Over the phone, far away.*

*But soon I learned and came to see,
A brand new world in front of me.
It was special, bright, and full of life,
With new friends, joy, and little strife.*

*It made me who I am today—
My heart, my soul, my own way.
My family, friends, and teachers too,
Have shaped my life in all I do.*

A WARNING FROM THE FUTURE

The year is 2070. Earth is no longer a happy home, but a warning for everyone. In the race to become powerful, countries fought many wars. Because of this, the land has turned into ashes, and the oceans are filled with harmful chemicals.

The air, which was once full of birds' songs, and the sky, which used to be clear and blue, are now dark orange with strong storms and falling satellites. Cities have been destroyed. Tall buildings have fallen and lie in dusty valleys. The sound of life has been replaced by the crackling noise of things breaking and ending.

Now, Earth moves silently in space like a forgotten picture—damaged and lonely. Human life has become very difficult, and people have turned into scavengers, searching for whatever they can find. The silence feels heavy, and memories of the past are no longer happy.

Far away, on other planets, the survivors have built new homes in metal towers. Life there depends on machines and artificial systems.

This makes us wonder—was all this really necessary? If people had cared for nature and lived in peace with each other, Earth would not have become so empty and lifeless.
